

*Is there a God?
Aren't all religions the same?
Is Jesus God?*

Many Christians consider apologetics (the study and practice of defending the faith) a discipline reserved for people in academic circles, but all followers of Christ should carefully consider why they believe what they believe.

In a culture that says all beliefs are equally valid, it's critical that we recognize the dangerous delusion of that idea and equip ourselves to speak with confidence about biblical truth.

Join us to examine six questions that will move you beyond the cultural norm of "this is what I think" to the truth that compels others to believe.
