KELLY MINTER // Living on Mission in Community

Jesus has collectively called us to be the salt and light of this earth. Together, we're called to change the world by serving others and using our lives to bless the people around us. But many of us are lonely and without direction. We don't know how to do this or who to do it with. We'll address these questions together as we look at Jesus' exciting call on our lives to be on mission, and how this also deepens our community and connection with others.

JACKIE HILL PERRY // Gay Girl, Good God

A gay girl once? Yes. Now? Jackie is what God's goodness will do to a soul once grace gets to it. In her latest book Gay Girl, Good God: The Story of Who I was and What God Has Always Been, Jackie Hill Perry unpacks her story, pointing to what led her away from the church, into a lifestyle of sin, and the simple gospel she'd learned in Sunday school that ended up bringing her to faith. In this workshop, she will discuss many of these same themes, along with some biblical instruction for those seeking to learn how to love the gay community well.

WHITNEY CAPPS // Better Together: The Call of Biblical Community

Most of us have been hurt by community and yet, we desperately want to feel connected, known and understood. Social media and life in the 21st century has a way of filtering out the biblical call and context for friendship. The New Testament gives us a glimpse into healthy, Christ-exalting friendships, and between women! Whether we need help or healing, God's Word will tell us what it looks like to live together for the gospel.

JAMIE IVEY // Understanding Your Story and Why It Matters

Everyone has a story and stories change the world. The Bible is full of stories about people who had their lives changed. As Christ followers, we have that same transformative story to share. Learn why your story matters. Learn what it looks like to share your story while pointing others to Jesus.
